Leadership message

Dear friends,

During our 14th year of food recovery, we centered on purpose, and focused our fundraising and advocacy efforts to support programmatic growth and expansion in future years. We did this by investing in our team to drive progress, deepening partnerships, and growing our impact across Massachusetts. Though these endeavors resulted in a shortfall in 2024, these critical commitments set us up to deliver on our Strategic Plan – and the results are clear.

Our Programs Team recovered and delivered over 5.5 million pounds of food – our highest total ever and 17% more than the previous year. We worked to further optimize our routes, increasing efficiency and ensuring even more fresh, healthy food reached those who needed it most.

Our Communications & Public Affairs Team led our rebrand to “Spoonfuls,” sharpening our messaging and reinforcing our commitment to delivering food with purpose. They championed food recovery on a broader scale, working to educate on the issues at the heart of our work (curbing wasted food, fighting food insecurity, and addressing the climate emergency) while advocating for systemic, policy-driven solutions to these issues.

Our Development Team focused on nurturing relationships with supporters, reimagining signature events like our Ultimate Tailgate, and adding capacity on the team to drive fundraising growth in 2025.

And our Strategic Administration & Human Resources Team supported the people and systems infrastructure needed to power our operations and expansion.

This is just the beginning of an exciting growth period for Spoonfuls. With your continued support, we will scale our impact even further – recovering more food, reaching more people, and building a stronger, more resilient food system.

In gratitude,

Ashley Stanley
Founder & CEO

Lisa Fall
Chair, Board of Directors

By the numbers

2024 was a record-breaking year with
5,500,000+ lbs. recovered.

90% of what we recovered was fresh food, including produce, meat, and dairy.

Recovering that much food has an impact on:

People

The food we recovered last year reached 370,000 neighbors facing food insecurity and was enough to create 5 million meals.

Planet

Keeping this food out of landfills in the region last year was like preventing 300,000 miles of driving emissions.

Economy

The food we recovered across Massachusetts last year was worth $10,000,000+.

By the numbers (cont.)

Year-over-year growth

Why we do it

In the U.S., 31% of all food goes unsold or uneaten. In Massachusetts alone, over 1 million tons of food hit the waste stream annually while 1 in 6 households faces food insecurity (ReFED, Project Bread).

Spoonfuls recovered 17% more food in 2024 than in 2023 without expanding our food recovery fleet.

Collaboration is central to our work

Spoonfuls' network of nearly 300 partners enables us to recover and distribute food across Massachusetts. Collaboration is key to our effective and scalable food recovery model. Learn more about the businesses and organizations we work with on the coming pages.

“

Spoonfuls has been a tremendous help to our community. The work that Spoonfuls does covers an area of service that is increasing in need and that we would not have the capacity to cover on our own.

Aida Bonilla, Area Administrator, Catholic Charities Worcester County

Where food comes from:

Food retailers & brands

In 2024, our team sourced food from over 90 different locations across Massachusetts each week – the majority of it excess or unsold perishable food from grocery stores, wholesalers, and farms. Our thanks to the following companies for working with us to ensure food retained its value and fulfilled its purpose: to feed people!

Where food comes from:

Additional food recovery opportunities

Over and above our regular, weekly pick-ups, we've also responded to a number of special, one-off opportunities to recover and deliver food.

Take Dumpling Daughter. Nadia Liu Spellman, Dumpling Daughter's Founder & CEO and member of Spoonfuls' Culinary Board, reached out to us when she realized their manufacturer prepared 90,000 frozen dumplings with less soy sauce than the recipe required.

As a result, these dumplings didn't meet quality standards and couldn't be sold, but Nadia and the Dumpling Daughter team didn't want to see the still-savory dumplings go to waste.

Enter: Spoonfuls. Our Food Recovery Team worked with Dumpling Daughter to pick up three pallets of tasty food and distributed it all, same day, to United Way of Tri-County's Pearl St. Cupboard – one of our community partners in MetroWest.

This is just one of many such times our team stepped up to do more in 2024. This nimble response was thanks to the growth of our Programs Team and its efforts to optimize routes and identify efficiencies to recover more food and feed more people. With thanks to Dumpling Daughter and all our food donors for working with us to keep good, excess food out of landfills!

Spoonfuls' Food Recovery Team and Pearl St. Cupboard Staff pose with the three pallets of still-delicious dumplings.

Nadia Liu Spellman, CEO of Dumpling Daughter and member of Spoonfuls' Culinary Board, joins our team on the road.

Community organizations

200+ community organizations received Spoonfuls' same-day deliveries in 2024. They worked with us to ensure good food quickly reached people – over 370,000 individuals – who could use it. We're grateful for their partnership!

Our partners include

- Pantries and meal programs
- Shelters and transitional housing
- Afterschool programs
- Veterans centers
- Treatment and recovery programs
- And more!

Fun facts

- We onboarded 19 new community organizations in 2024.
- Boston Rescue Mission is our longest standing community partnership. We began distributing food there in 2010.
- In many instances, we deliver to multiple locations under the same organizational umbrella – for example, 10+ SMOC locations across Massachusetts.

Spoonfuls' deliveries mean everything. They mean people not going hungry and parents not worrying. And they provide dignity to our clients. We find most people don't want to ask for help because they are proud. With the support of deliveries from Spoonfuls, we're able to divvy up food to our clients without anyone feeling like they're begging.

“Beyond addressing food insecurity, Spoonfuls’ distributions have also fostered a sense of community. Residents help each other find specific items, share food when there isn’t enough, and even cook for one another. On behalf of our folks here, we want to say thank you not only to the Spoonfuls team but to Spoonfuls' donors. Because of their donations, they're changing lives. I say that literally – they are changing lives. There are people who went hungry that are no longer going hungry because of Spoonfuls and the donations to Spoonfuls that enable their food recovery work.

Eric Segundo, Director of Veterans Services, Ludlow Veterans Center

Meet Larry

Larry is a resident and current staff member of Boston Rescue Mission, where Spoonfuls has been delivering fresh, recovered food each week for over 14 years. Read on, as Larry shares his perspective on our work.

As someone who has both utilized the services and worked at Boston Rescue Mission, I can say with confidence: Boston Rescue Mission and the programs they provide, including the meals they offer with the help of Spoonfuls, saved my life.

When I first came to Boston Rescue Mission in my time of need, they provided me the necessities I couldn't obtain myself to help me get back on my feet, including a place to stay, opportunities to learn new life skills, and, of course, home-cooked meals made from ingredients that came in part from Spoonfuls' food deliveries.

Now, I work in the Boston Rescue Mission kitchen. Not only am I able to make a living with the cooking skills I've honed, but I've also gained a deeper appreciation for how Spoonfuls' food can round out a meal and help me get creative with what I'm serving to others seeking support here the way I did for the first time years ago.

Spoonfuls' deliveries always surprise me with what I need, from sides like potatoes and salad, to the main event like steak and spaghetti. When our kitchen is lacking essentials, we can count on Spoonfuls to fill in the gaps. I get to openly communicate with the Spoonfuls team about what they've recovered for us each day, and get to practice planning meals on the fly.

Working at Boston Rescue Mission and partnering with Spoonfuls has helped me to recognize how capable I am. I'm better able to support myself cooking the food we receive, and I'm able to help other community members by connecting them with wholesome meals that fuel their recuperation, paying forward the help that got me to where I am today. I wouldn't be able to do that without the partnership between Boston Rescue Mission and Spoonfuls.

This work is all hands on deck

Education and advocacy at Spoonfuls

Tackling food waste, food insecurity, and the climate emergency requires all hands on deck. That's why we work in collaboration with others in our community to educate and advocate for promising programmatic and policy solutions to these pressing issues.

By the numbers

500+ people introduced to Spoonfuls' Advocacy Priorities during webinars and conferences where Spoonfuls was a lead presenter

25 presentations to schools, local businesses, and more to spread the word about the issue of wasted food and Spoonfuls' impact

21 coalition and community groups in which we were active participants, working to decrease waste, improve food access, and curb hunger

9 letters to legislators in which we, together with our coalition partners, advocated around the Farm Bill, food literacy, and other opportunities to build a stronger food system

Spoonfuls joined the Zero Food Waste Coalition for a day of meetings with legislators in Washington, D.C.

Senior Community Relations Manager, Liz Miller, speaks to Franklin Food Pantry about food recovery.

More on education & advocacy

Other 2024 highlights from our Public Affairs Team include:

- ✓ The debut of our Food Waste Challenge, where we rallied participants to take personal action toward minimizing the amount of food waste they generate at home.

Through conversations with the Massachusetts Food System Caucus and MA Food System Collaborative, we advocated that the tax incentives outlined in An Act encouraging the
- ✓ donation of food to persons in need also apply to grocery stores. The new version of the bill (formally proposed at the beginning of 2025) does just that, expanding upon restaurants and farms that were already included.
- ✓ Meetings with over a dozen elected officials and staff to raise awareness of our work and the role of food recovery as a critical tool to reduce waste and alleviate food insecurity.

Solutions spotlight: Organics Waste Ban

The Massachusetts Commercial Food Materials Disposal Ban (more commonly, the Organics Waste Ban) prevents food waste from hitting landfills. It requires businesses that would produce 1/2 ton of food waste per week to, instead, work to divert it. Grocery stores and wholesalers, some restaurants, and cafeterias can stay in compliance with the ban by opting to donate excess or unsold food, composting food scraps, or turning them into energy through anaerobic digestion, as a few options.

Spoonfuls helped inform the original draft of the ban in 2014, and, since that time, has worked to raise awareness of the opportunities it creates for food recovery through conversation with retail and brand partners, coalition leaders, and more.

"While food recovery isn't the only option available to those looking to divert waste under the ban, it's the first best option for still-edible food," says Joni Kusminsky, Spoonfuls' Senior Director of Communications & Public Affairs.

"What we find is that, sometimes, even businesses with robust waste diversion programs are missing opportunities to donate still-good food. For example, some have wonderful composting programs, but a portion of what they're composting could have been intercepted by our team and delivered to programs that would have used it to feed people while it was still safe and good to eat. We want to be a resource for those food businesses trying not only to divert waste but also make an immediate human impact."
